City Council, Greenbelt Station Residents Meet, Discuss Issues

by Matthew Arbach

On August 14 the Greenbelt City Council held a worksession at Greenbelt Station. The session considered issues surrounding the planned trail between Greenbelt Station residences and the Metro Station, recreation, police matters and schools. Providing an update were Director of Planning and Community Development Terri Hruby, Greenbelt Police Chief Richard Bowers, Recreation Supervisor Greg Varda, as well as District 22 State Delegate Alonzo Washington.

Hruby began the meeting with the latest information on the future pedestrian/bike trail that would connect Greenbelt Station to the Metro Station, a part of the overall plan for the community, according to Hruby. The newest step is council approval of a connection agreement to be sent to Washington Metro-

First Stop for 2019 City Election: Registering to Vote in Greenbelt

by Kathleen Gallagher

Participating in the November 5 City Council election – whether to run for office, sign a candidate's petition or vote – requires being registered with Prince George's County at a residence address within the boundaries of the City of Greenbelt.

For those not registered, Monday, October 7 is the deadline for registering in time to vote in the election. This deadline also applies to making changes to one's name or address. Registrations must be received by the Prince George's County Board of Elections at 1100 Mercantile Lane, Suite 115A, in Largo, no later than their closing time at 4:30 p.m.

Verify Registration

Anyone who wishes to verify that they are properly registered can either call the County Board of Elections at 301-341-7300 or look up their registration on the website of the Maryland State Board of Elections at elections.maryland.gov. From the home page, click on Voter Services under Hot Topics. While this information will confirm the details of the registration, voters should be aware that the polling place listed for them on this site will be the one used for county, state and federal elections. It may not be the same as the site used for city elections.

Greenbelt Labor Day Festival: Unity Through Community

by Julie Rapp

On Tuesday, August 27, Greenbelt Public Works employees Brian Allen (left) and Fredy Herrera build booths for the Labor Day Festival.

The Annual Greenbelt Labor Day Festival is fast approaching. The Festival begins on Friday, August 30, and continues through Monday, September 2. The Festival is a unique community celebration, one of the largest events of its kind in the State of Maryland. Many former Greenbelters return for this special weekend to attend reunions with family and friends.

The Festival is organized and conducted by an independent volunteer group, the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Committee. Linda Ivy continues as the long-time president of the Festival's board of directors. The committee is comprised of generous and dedicated citizens who have worked long hours over the past year to ensure that we all have a wonderful time.

An opening ceremony and concert will be held on Friday evening at 6:30 p.m. with introductions of dignitaries and presentation of the Outstanding Citizen Award, which honors citizens who make Greenbelt great. The carnival midway opens at

What a Wonderful Place to Live

Thursday I was driving to the post office when the right front axle broke on my car at the intersection of Ridge and Southway. I put on the emergency flashers, raised the hood, called AAA and sat and waited. So many people stopped to ask if I was okay, if they could jump-start the battery, give me water, a ride somewhere, etc. A Greenbelt policeman saw me there and lit two flares behind my car.

I reassured them all that I was fine and the tow truck was on the way, but I would just like to give a big shout-out of thanks to all the Good Samaritans in Greenbelt. A big thanks also to the caring, competent and helpful people at Greenbelt Auto and Truck Repair who had my car ready for me to drive away the next afternoon. I'm so happy I live here!

Maglev Questions

I attended the update meeting on April 26. When questions were opened to the floor I asked representative David Henley of Baltimore Washington Rapid Rail this question: the proposed train is to be built 80 to 100 feet underground, with vents/shafts every 3 or 4 miles. As we are all aware unforeseen problems may occur. What are the evacuation plans for riders? Mr. Henley seemed surprised at the question and then said he guessed there would be a ladder or stairs at the vent/shafts. A councilmember asked for clarification to which Mr. Henley responded that maybe a safe area would be available until first responders could safely guide people out.

I would still like to know how people of all ages are to evacuate, running, pushing and attempting to climb a ladder 80 to 100 feet to reach ground level and maybe safety.

I also would like to know if engineering and environmental studies have been completed, and if so where are they available. The last I heard these studies would not be completed until the proposed maglev was approved.

How much are Maryland taxpayers going to need to subsidize this train between Baltimore and Washington with no stops in-between? Proponents of the maglev say that after this segment is built it will be extended to New York and Boston. Have Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts or any other state agreed to this plan? Last time I heard, no state has agreed.

Dispose of Properly

Most dog owners in Greenbelt are responsible and respectful of the request to clean up after their dogs. But twice I saw a fellow dog owner put her dog's waste bag in the container of clean bags that have been placed for our convenience in case you forgot to bring a bag. I twice told her the containers were for clean bags and twice her response was "everybody else is doing it." Obviously, this is not true or the container would be overflowing.

I did ask her "who is going to clean that out?" No response. It was disappointing to see that she wouldn't cooperate.

Can we as a community afford to replace the containers with metal ones that cannot be used for dumping dirty bags? I believe the majority of the community would agree that this is a better way to handle this situation.

They end up as an unlikely foursome on a hilarious tour of the deep South as they try to get the biggest price for the relic from assorted conspiracy theorists and local fanatics.

Revealing and deeply personal, this documentary explores the life and creative renaissance of music icon David Crosby. Thoughtful Discussion At Roosevelt Center

Amid concern about human effects on the environment, the MakerSpace thoughtful discussion group will grapple with the question of the environment’s effects on humans. How does where someone lives, whether city, suburb or someplace rural, affect them? Does green space beget a rosy outlook? The hope is to cut through the jungle of metaphor surrounding the issue – the urban beehive or rural cultural wasteland – and really think about the psychic value of where we live.

Join the discussion on Tuesday, September 3, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the umbrella tables at the Roosevelt Center. One effect of the environment on humans is that the meeting will be cancelled in case of inclement weather.

St. Hugh's Class of 1974 Holds West Coast Reunion

by Michael Donkis

Several members of the St. Hugh's School Class of 1974 staged an impromptu 45-year reunion, West Coast style. Kathleen (Kacks) Fitzgerald Schiavone, Ellen Geiger, Teresa Keller Kurz and Dawn Olverson flew to Northern California, where they met up with Mark White and spent several days touring San Francisco and Big Sur, before Schiavone, Geiger, Kurz and Olverson drove down the beautiful Pacific Coast Highway, arriving in Los Angeles to meet up with Michael Donkis. The visitors bunked for their Southern California stay with Donkis, his daughter Ellie and mother Shirley, a recent West Coast transplant after living in Greenbelt for 75 years. One of the highlights of their Hollywood visit was a final night feast at Beverly Hills restaurant Spago, owned by celebrity chef Wolfgang Puck. While they dined, Puck came by the table to say hello. He was so taken with one of Geiger's stories about watching him on QVC that he paraded her around the restaurant to share the story with other tables. He later sent his favorite desserts to the table and bid the travelers farewell as they left.

Schiavone and Olverson grew up in the Lakewood development, Kurz and Geiger on Lakeside Drive, White on Woodland Way and Donkis on Northway Road and in Charlestowne Village. Schiavone, Geiger, Olverson and White currently live in or around Washington, D.C., Kurz in Florida and Donkis in Los Angeles.

North Woods Stream Needs Name: Maybe Sarah’s Creek?

by Owen Kelley

One of three streams in Greenbelt’s North Woods lacks a proper name, and the Forest Preserve Advisory Board is proposing to give it a name that honors the nearly forgotten history of the land. Residents are invited to provide feedback on the proposed name or to suggest another name.

These days, we awkwardly refer to the small stream in the valley between Northway and Plateau Place as Northway Stream. The Forest Preserve Advisory Board feels that we can do better than to name a natural feature after a nearby road.

Consider that the deeply incised stream between Plateau Place and Laurel Hill Road is aptly called Canyon Creek. The broader stream that parallels the Baltimore-Washington Parkway is called Goddard Branch because it flows from Goddard Space Flight Center, and that facility is named after Robert Goddard, a famous American who developed liquid-fueled rockets.

It would invoke local history if we decided to call the small stream that parallels Northway Sarah’s Creek, after Sarah Boteler, who may have been the last person to farm this land. We are unsure how to pronounce her name, but bott-ler, as in bottle, is as good a guess as any.

The U.S. Agricultural Census of 1860 shows the widow Sarah Alice Burton Boteler (1817-1871) and her five children farming about half of the 175 acres that she owned. From 1858 to 1866, Sarah owned the dry summit of Blueberry Hill, the steep southern and eastern slopes of the hill, the nameless stream under discussion and the northern portion of the present-day Hamilton Woods. Despite the hilly and swampy lay of the land, Sarah produced in a year 200 bushels of wheat, 20 bushels of rye, 500 bushels of Indian corn, 75 bushels of oats, 6,000 pounds of tobacco, 35 pounds of wool and 80 pounds of butter. The farm kept three horses, four milk cows, two other cattle and 11 sheep.

On a cold December day John and Ezekiel Kelley walk on top of the unnamed stream that parallels Northway.

In 1866, the elderly Sarah Boteler sold the land, and there is no record of anyone farming it in 1870 or 1880. A 1913 survey of Prince George’s County identified this land as “culled” forest, forest that had been selectively thinned for timber.

Goddard Branch is named after a man whose only connection to this land is that the watershed begins upstream within Goddard Space Flight Center. Why not name the neighboring creek “Sarah’s Creek,” after a woman who actually lived on and farmed part of the North Woods, 150 years ago? Send comments to forestpreserve@greenbeltmd.gov.

City to Try Captioning Instead Of Interpreters at Meetings

by Kathleen Gallagher

After many years of using sign language interpreters for the cablecasting of regular city council meetings, Greenbelt is experimenting with closed captioning. At the August 12 meeting, council voted unanimously to support a one-year trial period, which will likely begin in early October.

During the cable cast, the interpreter’s picture is inserted in the bottom corner of the screen. Beverly Palau, the city public information and communication coordinator, said that viewers find this is not always effective when the picture is small. She added that it is difficult to try to maintain the best ratio of the images.

Palau gathered information at conferences and surveyed municipalities about what captioning services they use. She also spoke with three companies about their services and costs. Granicus, the company that currently supports the city’s website, streaming and other services, offers live captioning done by a person, as does another company called 3 Play Media.

The director of the City of Laurel’s public access channel highly recommended hardware and voice recognition. Laurel and other cities use a company called Municipal Captioning with excellent results. It is only slightly less accurate than captioning done by a human being. Palau says it will enable captioning for Wednesday night worksessions and possibly other types of programming for approximately what the city is already paying. As an extra benefit, it will provide a full transcript of the meeting.

Mayor Emmett Jordan asked Palau if trying it for a shorter period than a year might be doable. Palau explained that the up-front cost of equipment and training for staff was reason to invest for a longer period.

Council unanimously supported Councilmember Judith Davis’s motion to undertake the one-year trial. Jordan and Councilmember Colin Byrd both stressed the need to seek feedback on the new system from people who are deaf and hard of hearing.

Satellite Servicing Team Pitches in at Greenbelt Park

by Kathryn Cawdrey

From left, Ben Reed, Ursula Tooley, Terri Rutledge and Maia Tooley accept a plaque on Craig Tooley’s behalf. The walnut plaque displays an SSPD patch that flew over 12.5 million miles aboard the International Space Station.

Swollen rain clouds loomed overhead as 30 NASA employees, donning pastel-colored ponchos, gathered in Greenbelt Park to perform trail maintenance. Park Superintendent Matthew Carroll greeted the agency visitors as rain fell steadily from noon to 3 p.m. on Friday, August 23.

Headquartered at Goddard Space Flight Center, NASA’s Satellite Servicing Project Division (SSPD) organized the volunteer event as part of the newly-established Craig Tooley Initiative. The initiative was created to remember and honor an influential NASA project manager who died from pancreatic cancer in September 2017. Tooley was a father, husband, outdoorsman and Greenbelt resident who was passionate about getting involved in the local community.

He was a key member of some of Goddard’s most high-profile space exploration missions, including the Hubble Space Telescope Servicing Missions and the Lunar Reconnaissance Mission. He was also a two-time recipient of the NASA Outstanding Leadership Medal.

“Craig was a role model with his excellence in project management and his giving back to the community,” said SSPD Deputy Director Ben Reed.

SSPD reached out to the Good Neighbors Group, which strengthens communities by sharing service opportunities that have a positive social and environmental impact. The group linked them to the Greenbelt Park’s volunteering opportunities.

A pick-up truck hauled a white cargo trailer into the Holly Picnic Area parking lot for the park’s latest group of helpers. The unlatched trailer door swung down to reveal bins of trash pickers, work gloves and bladed tools. NASA employees and their guests huddled around the Park staff to gather their desired supplies.

Despite the soggy conditions, volunteers lobbed low-hanging branches, pruned protruding leaves and cut grass from the trails. Split into two groups, the pruners and loppers made their way through the park’s trail network clearing trash and cracking jokes. Pinned beneath the rain coats and vibrant ponchos, each person wore a small purple ribbon to represent pancreatic cancer awareness.

Tooley’s wife Terri Rutledge and daughters Ursula and Maia Tooley were also in attendance to celebrate his memory and accept a commemorative plaque on his behalf. Reed presented the plaque to honor Tooley, thank him for his service to SSPD and mark the first installment of a now-recurring initiative.

“He was a wonderful family man,” Reed said. “It’s an honor to be associated with his legacy.”

The Roosevelts in Greenbelt

by James Giese

(This is the second of a three-part series about the visits of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt to Greenbelt. The first story reported primarily on the President's visits. This and the third part of the story are about the First Lady's visits.)

Eleanor Roosevelt travelled about the country extensively, both officially as the First Lady and unofficially. She often travelled alone or with friends on personal journeys. She was known to take drives about town in her convertible as well as to go horseback riding. In that era, Sunday drives were common among those who owned automobiles and the Roosevelts enjoyed taking rides as well.

As First Lady, her activities would not have been documented in easily accessible form were it not for her six-day-a-week newspaper column, My Day, which reads very much like a personal diary and is now accessible on the internet (erpapers.columbian.gwu.edu/my-day).

Roosevelt's articles document four visits to Greenbelt, two during construction, one soon after residents moved in and one during the war to attend a civilian defense rally. Resident recollections, however, indicate there might have been additional visits after residents moved in.

Then there is the unreported trip in the fall of 1934 to see the proposed project site before the President approved and Congress funded construction of the new community. Leta Mach in her article in History of a New Town quotes Rexford Guy Tugwell, who spearheaded the Green Towns project, as taking the President on a drive to see the site for Greenbelt. But as noted in part one, Henry Brautigam recollected that his once-neighbor and friend Tugwell told him that Eleanor also went along on that Sunday drive. If so, that would be Eleanor's first visit to what would become Greenbelt.

Personal Interest

In her book Greenbelt: A Living Legacy of the New Deal, Cathy D. Knepper tells of Eleanor's personal interest in Tugwell's proposed Resettlement Administration. Knepper reports that Tugwell organized a planning meeting to formulate the new administration and invited Roosevelt to attend. She did, as did Bernard Baruch, John Dewey and Clarence Stein who conceived and built the planned community of Radburn, N.J., a predecessor to Greenbelt.

Mach also reports on the Roosevelts' interest in the Tugwell project: "On April 30, 1936, the complete Greenbelt plans were reviewed at the White House by President and Mrs. Roosevelt. The subsequent full support of the President was crucial to the success of the project. Throughout, his support was encouraged and sustained by Mrs. Roosevelt, who took a personal, continued interest in the development of Greenbelt."

She visited the project during construction on Sunday, May 23, 1937, a time when there would be few if any workmen present. According to her My Day account, "We drove back last night through two violent storms but nobody's ardor was dampened. This morning the entire group, with a few additions of people who are here in Washington, visited Greenbelt which is just across the District line in Maryland. At present they have come in for a good deal of criticism. I think as in so many cases, the people who criticize do so without a complete knowledge of the facts. Of course, it is possible that some people do not believe that the government has a duty to point the way for better housing for low income groups, but if anybody believes that an effort should be made along these lines, I think they could hardly object to what has been done in Greenbelt. It is entirely different from the other homesteads in that it has been designed for people whose incomes range from two thousand dollars a year down and it is not designed to take in a stranded industrial or agricultural group. Here again the idea is to make the school useful to the community as a whole. It will be in use during the day for the children, but from the moment they are out of the building their elders may use it until they go to bed at night. It is to function as a community center – very much the same idea that has been fostered at Arthurdale." (Arthurdale, W.V., was another Resettlement Administration project. It was a small community of homes for nearby farmers.)

Tree or No Tree?

Some controversy remains over this visit. Pioneer resident James C. Smith, who later became a city councilmember, put a letter to the editor in the December 1, 1966 News Review in which he wrote: "Historical Tree. There's something about old trees that intrigues me, especially the one next to Crescent Road, between Northway and the entrance to Lakewood, in which a footnote of history occurred. There on a platform in this tree stood government officials and others, including Eleanor Roosevelt, overlooking the workmen busily engaged making Greenbelt the reality it was to become. The tree is a majestic specimen of the sturdy white oak family standing near a benchmark in a picturesque surrounding. Someday, for posterity's sake, the city should place a plaque there and fence it in as a living memorial to the First Lady of the New Deal regime."

Smith pursued this proposal and with the support of the Greenbelt Women's Club, spearheaded by Carnie Harper, raised the funds and received the city council's approval to erect a commemorative plaque at this site (actually, behind a since-built Boxwood Village home between Green Hill Road and Lastner Lane). The tree promptly died and a successor tree grew leaning over the road and had to be removed.

Former Greenbelt Director of Public Works Albert S. Attick, who worked as a security guard on the project before becoming a city employee, told me that Smith got the wrong tree and that the actual tree was where the construction work was taking place.

It would have made no sense to have had anyone observe construction at the memorial tree because no construction took place there. At most, one could have seen the lake, but there would have been better viewing vantage points for that. While I have not been able to find an aerial photo in the Library of Congress files taken during construction showing that particular location, every photo of nearby land indicates that the area was fully treed on both sides of the road. Nor have I been able to locate a large tree near where construction was taking place at that time. However, all the aerial photos were taken when deciduous trees were without leaves, so that such trees are almost impossible to identify from on high.

Return Visit

Eleanor's excitement over the project is probably the reason she decided to take the wife of the Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau Jr. out for a quick visit to the project four days later. In accounting for that Thursday, May 27 visit in My Day, she reported that it had taken place between opening her mail that morning, since the person who normally did it was away, and lunch on the White House porch. Her account provides no other details, but on that day of the apparently unofficial visit, men should have been at work.

Labor Day Festival Logo Selected 43 Years Ago

We are reprinting two brief articles from the Greenbelt News Review archives describing the history of the Labor Day Festival logo. At the end of each article is a link to the issue of the News Review from the archives, which are currently being scanned and uploaded by volunteers working with the Greenbelt Archive Project (greenbeltarchive.org/).

Contest Announcement

The Greenbelt Labor Day Festival and the Greenbelt Recreation Department announce a contest for a design for a logo for the Festival. A logo is an emblem – such as the Bicentennial emblem – which conveys a particular idea in a very short, succinct manner. The Festival Committee is seeking such an emblem which would combine the idea of the Festival’s theme, which is “unity through community involvement,” and the idea of Labor Day. All entries should be done in black and white so that the winning entry may be reproduced for publication in the News Review. Entries will be received in the office of the Youth Center either in person or by mail no later than August 27. Judging will be based on concept in addition to artistic merit. The Art Committee for the Festival will serve as judge and all entries will become the property of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival. The winning entry will be used as the logo for the 1977 Labor Day Festival and may be adopted by the steering committee for use in all articles about the Festival in years to come. All entries will be displayed in the Festival’s Art Show. In addition the winner will receive a prize donated by the Recreation Department. For further information, contact Festival Special Events Chairman Sandra Barnes.

Contest Winner

This winning entry in the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Logo Contest was designed and drawn by Joanne Volk, 17-G Ridge. Volk, a Greenbelt resident for twelve years, is a member of the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board. She is an architect associated with the firm of Ronald Sensman of Langley Park. Her design centers around the festival theme “Unity through community involvement.” The logo is made up of separate units unified into one whole, suggesting many people working on one project. It also suggests a looped green belt. The words announce the festival.

City, GHI Talk Water Pipes, Poison Ivy, Highways, Deer

by Kathleen Gallagher

The Greenbelt City Council held its annual stakeholder meeting with the Board of Directors of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) on July 22. All seven councilmembers and all nine board directors were present. Since the meeting was held in the GHI Board Room, Board President Steven Skolnik invoked homeowner privilege and served as chair. City Manager Nicole Ard, GHI General Manager Eldon Ralph and Greenbelt Director of Planning Terri Hruby were also in attendance.

There was minimal space for GHI residents or members of the public to attend the meeting. Those interested can find a recording of the meeting on the city’s website (greenbeltmd.gov) via the button for Municipal Access TV.

Many of the agenda items for this annual meeting appear every year for updates. Often leading the list, as it did this year, is the proposal of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) to undertake much-needed water supply and sewer pipe replacement for GHI’s masonry homes. In a 1958 agreement signed by WSSC, the City of Greenbelt and GHI, WSSC took ownership of the water pipes up to the meter boxes located at the housing units. Under its more recent proposals, which neither the city nor GHI has accepted, GHI would be responsible for the pipes down to the street. The new pipes would then become GHI’s responsibility to maintain and replace in the future, which would place a substantial ongoing expenditure on GHI residents.

Although there was some opinion that letting sleeping dogs lie might be the best approach, there was agreement to send a joint letter from GHI and the city to WSSC to request another meeting.

State, County Projects

The status of the county zoning rewrite, particularly the development of the proposed Neighborhood Conservation Zone (NCOZ) for Greenbelt, was reviewed, as were the maglev and loop projects and the proposed widening of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and Capital Beltway. City and GHI staff will continue to keep each other apprised of any developments.

Poison Ivy Control

Asked if it undertakes control of poison ivy within the GHI community, the city responded that it actively checks playgrounds for poison ivy, as well as checking Buddy Attick Park prior to the 4th of July celebration. Poison ivy is also removed by Public Works in response to resident complaints and if it is found in areas where people are likely to come into close contact with it.

Bicycles/Electric Cars

GHI strongly encouraged installing bicycle racks throughout the city and increasing the number of car charging stations. Discussion included the costs of these items and the need to find funding sources. Councilmember Judith Davis mentioned the city’s practice of requiring developers to include charging stations in their plans.

City Internet Access

GHI asked if the city has considered providing internet access to its residents. The response was that although there has been brief discussion of developing a city-owned fiber system, and the city continues to expand Wi-Fi access in city facilities, citywide Wi-Fi services have not been under consideration.

Playgrounds

The city renovated a GHI playground at 8 Southway earlier this year and has the one at 6 Research Road on the list for next year. The city and GHI participate in a playground maintenance agreement, by which the city provides maintenance at a reduced cost provided that the playground is open to the public.

11 & 13 Court Lighting

Two years ago, the city surveyed residents of the 11 and 13 Courts of Ridge Road regarding installing lighting in the pathway between the two courts. According to Ard, this was one of many projects not funded that year. Time having passed, the city requested that GHI take a new survey of residents of those courts if it wishes to have the project considered again. GHI board members noted that use of this pathway is by no means limited to residents of those courts or even to members of GHI.

Oh, Deer!

In a number of areas in GHI there appears to be a larger than usual deer population this year. Asked if the city had considered plans to control them, Ard said Greenbelt does not have the capacity to handle that, though options continue to be explored. The city refers residents to the guidelines of the Humane Society and the State Wildlife Division. It was also noted that the deer hunting season on the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center begins in September.

Other topics discussed included continued progress on the resolution of rights-of-way encroachment areas between the city and GHI, and status of the city’s Gateway Signage project.

Franklin Park Gets Residents Pepped and Ready for School

by Gary Childs

Franklin Park apartments, along with CHEARS (Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society) and RUAK (Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness), sponsored Franklin Park’s first Back to School pep rally on Saturday, August 24. According to Denise Knight, director of resident services at Franklin Park, the goal of the event was to create a venue for students and parents to get excited about the coming school year. The organizers set up challenge stations incorporating math, spelling, as well as STEM and art selections to help everyone get into the mood for school. The volunteer team, made up of Franklin Park residents, Reid Temple AME Church members and other community residents, issued over 100 backpacks with supplies and gave away additional school supplies to an additional 400 residents. Also, the team distributed over 500 free books, raffles for a uniform voucher, an Amazon HD Fire tablet and a Chromebook. Knight added that Franklin Park staff is creating a mini video which will be posted on its social media pages later this week.

Knight said that the team was excited about the high level of participation and the feedback, and is already making notes about how to make a “bigger and even more impactful” event in 2020. Knight expressed her gratitude to everyone involved, from planners to volunteers to Greenbelt councilmembers who attended, and to everyone else who helped make the event a great success.

politan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) for their consideration and approval. Decided upon at the council meeting on August 12, the agreement would require the city to outline the terms of construction, use and maintenance of the trail. This agreement has evolved since October 2017, when WMATA offered a draft for city consideration. A revised version was created after input from the city attorney and planning staff, in conjunction with Woodlawn Development Corporation (WDC), the developer, and WMATA.

Hruby stated that the project is in the engineering phase, focused on the details involved in the construction. WDC will be creating a plan which must be approved by several parties before final construction can begin. The parties include Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, WMATA, council, Maryland Department of the Environment and Prince George's County. The city has earmarked $1.8 million for the project but expects that the final cost will be over $2 million after the engineering estimate. Hruby expects construction to begin in the fall of 2020.

Hruby stated that Greenbelt Station itself will be completed by the end of this year. After city approval, based on findings from an inspector, Hruby and Director of Public Works Jim Sterling, the community will transition from WDC to city management.

Residents expressed interest in the upcoming seats open for election in their homeowners association, which eventually will transition from WDC control to become completely held by residents.

Concerning policing, Bowers stated that as a new neighborhood, there is not much data concerning its ultimate policing needs. He said that auto theft is not unusual and is preventable by simple measures such as keeping items out of plain sight. There have been thefts from the construction site.

The police department is developing an initiative to combine all the safety cameras in the city into a single database in order to better generate leads in ongoing investigations. Bowers encouraged residents to participate.

Varda also encouraged residents to look into all the activities offered by Greenbelt Recreation as well as offer input on how the department can better provide for the needs of their community. He stressed the soon-to-be-finalized list of fall activities to be offered in Central Park, saying "there's lots of stuff to do!"

The meeting concluded with a discussion about school availability. Residents expressed a desire for enrollment in both Greenbelt Elementary School and Eleanor Roosevelt High School, based on their living within the city. Councilmembers expressed their agreement on this, Mayor Emmett Jordan asserting that "Greenbelt kids should be at Greenbelt schools."

Councilmember Leta Mach said that the matter has been brought to the attention of Prince George's County Schools CEO Monica Goldson and County Executive Angela Alsobrooks who said they were surprised and were amenable to further discussions.

Currently, Greenbelt Station students can attend Greenbelt schools with adult transportation, and there is a yet-to-be-confirmed plan for busing in the coming year. Said Mach, "the city council is happy to help."

Jordan said that Greenbelt Station "is coming together in a very cohesive fashion." He expressed hope that the community will work with the city to provide an environment where information is shared freely at this important time of transition.

must be a U.S. citizen and be at least 16 years old. Last year, Greenbelt revised the city charter to permit otherwise qualified residents ages 16 and 17 to vote in city elections. Unfortunately, this year's October 7 deadline means that would-be voters who will turn 16 from October 8 through November 5 will not be able to vote, despite the council legislation. The city's Board of Elections has indicated its willingness to look into solutions to this conflict for future elections. For example, the city could choose to register a 15-year-old who will turn 16 by election day.

Individuals found by court to be incapable of voting for mental disability are not eligible to register. No one is allowed to register who has been convicted of buying or selling votes. Persons who have been convicted of other felonies may register to vote if they have completed their court-ordered sentence of imprisonment, including any required term of parole or probation.

Student Registration

Otherwise qualified students who are attending colleges in Maryland may register to vote if they consider their local address to be their legal address or domicile. Usually that means it is the address that appears on tax returns or other government documents, driver's license, bank accounts, charge accounts and so forth. For more information about student registration, visit elections.maryland.gov and click on How Do I Register to Vote? and then Students Enrolled in

Registering – Just Do It

There are now so many ways to register to vote in Maryland that it is easier to just do it than to come up with an excuse not to. Registration may be done online, by mail or in person. For anyone holding a Maryland

Driver's license or a substitute Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) issued ID card, an easy way to register is on the state Board of Elections website using Maryland's Online Voter Registration System (OLVR). It requires submission of a name, date of birth and the last four digits of a social security number that match information already on file with the MVA. The signature on file at the MVA will then become the official voter registration signature.

Anyone who has neither a valid Maryland driver's license nor a substitute MVA-issued ID card must complete a paper voter registration form and either mail it to the County Board of Elections or submit it in person at the office of the county board at 1100 Mercantile Lane, #115a, Largo, by the deadline. This form cannot be faxed or emailed because it requires an original signature.

Voter registration forms may be downloaded and printed from the State Board of Elections site. Paper forms for mailing are also available at the city clerk's office in the Municipal Building at 25 Crescent Road and at the Greenbelt Library at 11 Crescent Road. If picking up a form is not possible, call the County Board of Elections office at 301-430-8020 and ask to receive one by mail.

Registration Changes

Registered Maryland voters are no longer required to reregister if they move to a new address within the state, even if they are crossing county lines. However, they must update their information. Address or name updates can be made using the same methods listed above for registering: online using the OLVR system at the State Board of Elections site if one has a Maryland Driver's license or MVA identification card; or using a voter registration form to be mailed to the County Board of Elections or submitted in person in Largo by the October 7 deadline.

Party Affiliation

Greenbelt's city council elections are nonpartisan, which means there are no primary elections and no candidate party designations or slates. In registering to vote, however, a resident has the option of registering with any of the state's recognized political parties for the purposes of voting in partisan primaries in presidential, state and county elections. Maryland's Democratic and Republican primaries for the 2020 presidential election will be held on April 28, 2020.

The political parties currently recognized in Maryland are the Democratic, Republican, and Bread and Roses (breadandroses.us) parties. Choosing no political party results in an unaffiliated registration, which means the voter will be able to vote in general elections but usually not in primary elections other than local, nonpartisan primaries: for example, to select nominees for school board elections.

For questions on voter registration for the city election, contact the Greenbelt city clerk's office at 301-474-8000 or the County Board of Elections at 301-341-7300. Additional information on the city election can be found on the city website at greenbeltmd.gov.

Heritage Center Hosts Tracing Ripples

An exhibit of paintings by College Park artist Sabine Carlson will be on display from August 13 to October 31 at the Pyramid Atlantic Art Center. Titled Tracing Ripples, the collection features paintings inspired by the land and waterscapes around Lake Artemesia, Patuxent Research Refuge, Paint Branch and the Anacostia River.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Annelie and Soren Ebbeler Maryland Milestones Heritage Center, operated by Anacostia Trails Heritage Area Inc. and located within Pyramid Atlantic.

Carlson describes her creative process: "Walking at a slow pace, I see combinations of detail moving in and out of view. These impressions become part of my materials, together with oil and acrylic paints, brushes, palette knives, squeegees and the studio dog I have to be careful not to trip over at times. Ways of traversing the landscape (out of

Vehicle Crime
A 34-year-old nonresident was arrested August 14 in the 7600 block Greenbelt Road and charged with rogue and vagabond by officers who responded to a report of a man removing a tire and rim from a vehicle. He was transported to the Department of Corrections for a hearing before a district court commissioner.
One vehicle was stolen, a white 4-door 2018 Chevrolet Malibu with Maryland tags

FZ6152, taken from the 9300 block Edmonston Road on August 17.
One vehicle was both stolen and recovered on August 16. The driver was fueling his vehicle at Greenbelt Exxon when he realized he could not find his keys. He left to get another one and when he returned, his vehicle, a 2019 Nissan Sentra, was gone. It was recovered a short time later, abandoned in the 7500 block Greenbelt Road.

Two vehicles were recovered. A 2016 Mercedes Benz E320 reported stolen to D.C. Metropolitan police was recovered August 16 in the 5700 block Greenbelt Metro Drive and a 2013 Kia Soul SUV reported stolen July 17 from the 6300 block Golden Triangle Drive was recovered August 20 by Maryland State police at an undisclosed location. One arrest was made.

Four tires and rims were taken from a vehicle in the 7800 block Mandan Road on August 15. A wallet was taken from an unlocked vehicle at Buddy Attick Park on August 19. A credit card in it was later used in an attempt to make unauthorized charges.

Vandalism
Vandalism was reported in the 6000 block Springhill Drive on August 20, when a gear shift handle was damaged.

Owl and Kestrel

On Saturday, August 31 from 12:15 to 12:45 p.m. at the Patuxent Research Refuge, visitors can meet two of North America's smallest birds of prey: the American kestrel and eastern screech owl. Both birds are expert hunters, but the kestrel uses its acrobatic prowess while the screech owl is a stealthy silent hunter. This program is for all ages.
Public programs at the refuge are free. For more information about the refuge, call 301-497-5887 or visit fws.gov/refuge/Patuxent. The Visitor Center is on Powder Mill Road between the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and Route 197.

School's Open, Drive Safely Program

School is again just around the corner and with it comes an increased volume of traffic including parents, teachers, staff and school buses. In an effort to educate more drivers at the beginning of the school year, reduce traffic complaints and, most importantly, attempt to provide a safe trip to and from school for students, the Greenbelt Police Department is undertaking a new enforcement initiative this year. Operation SODS – School's Open Drive Safely – is an initiative named by Traffic Officer Scott Yankow's 9-year-old son Mike Yankow.

During this three-week campaign, which began Monday, August 26, officers are conducting targeted enforcement in the immediate area of all Greenbelt schools during arrival and dismissal times. This enforcement is starting the week before students start school in an attempt to be visible and increase traffic compliance prior to the beginning of the school year.

Enforcement will continue through the second week of school to ensure the safety of all as the school year gets underway. Enforcement will be focused around the main walking routes to the schools. Officers will be looking for all violations, but will be focusing on speeding, stop sign violations, distracted driving and other traffic offenses dangerous to pedestrians.
For more information, contact police spokesman George Mathews at 240-508-0238.
